Patricia Neely - Wildlife Photographer

God's love for us speaks through the beauty of His amazing creation.

While growing up, my best friend was my horse Babe. I spent my day brushing and riding. I rode without a saddle, with just a small rope around her nose. We had chickens, ducks, turkeys, pigs, cows and horses. I loved this life, and it was a great learning opportunity. Eventually, I married and had five children, who are now grown.

I have lived in Susanville for over 25 years and studied photography at Lassen Community College from 2005 to 2008, under the direction of Lynn Fuller.

The abundance of wildlife in this area provides never ending and exciting subject matter and Eagle Lake is one of my favorite areas for photographing eagles, osprey, and grebes. Earlier this year, after waiting for hours at the lake, I was able to capture an eagle bringing a trout to her young.

For the past three years, I have been involved with capturing the magnificent wild horses in Nevada. My photograph of "Wild Horses Fighting", has won several awards, has been published in Range Magazine. My Highway 32 "Fall Color" picture is displayed in the Winnemucca Hospital.

I enjoy being out by myself, seeing the beauty of the lakes and forests. I work to capture that moment in time to which each story unfolds. My hope is that others can experience these same feeling though my photographs.
